VERNI | Celebrating a decade

Vernon and Trenton
Botha

Verni-Speciality Construction Products celebrated its 10th birthday on 14 January 2012. Founder and managing director Vernon Botha started the business from a plot in Linbro Park and has guided the business through several moves, constant expansion, and the rocky road that is the performance flooring industry, with a great deal of success.

In 2005 Vernon was joined on the board of directors by his son Trenton and together they have forged the company into a force to be reckoned with in the South African market, offering a full range of performance flooring encompassing epoxy, polyurethane, methyl methacrylate and cementitious-based flooring systems.

Verni also offer a full range of concrete corrosion protection systems, comprising acid-resistant tile and brick linings for the precious metals processing industry, mining, paper and pulp and related chemical industries. In 2010, Verni opened a regional office in the Eastern Cape and continued this expansion with the establishment of the Western Cape office in 2011.

Verni are unique in the South African market as they manufacture and apply all their own products, eliminating split guarantees. The past 10 years have seen Verni constantly moving with the times and embracing new technologies in order to keep abreast of developments within the performance flooring market.

During this time many blue-chip projects have been undertaken and completed and many challenges met and overcome. All signs are positive for the continued expansion of the Verni brand and the successful completion of many projects in the future.

Verni management thank all those companies and individuals who have been instrumental in making the first ten years so successful, and invite all our partners to join us in what is sure to be an exciting and prosperous future.
